Abstract

One of the observable phenomena in jurisprudential Ḥadīth texts is their contradiction (Ta‘āruḍ), which makes it difficult to understand their true intent. There are several methods for dealing with this category of narrations. Shaykh Ṭūsī, in his book Tahdhīb al-Aḥkām, utilized multiple approaches to resolve conflicting narrations. One of these is attributing the narration to Taqīyya (dissimulation). Based on the narrative texts of the Ahl al-Bayt (AS) regarding the discrepancy in ḥadīths, it becomes clear that various factors contributed to these differences, one of which is Taqīyya. The present study aims to answer the following questions: ‘What are Shaykh Ṭūsī’s criteria for attributing narrations to Taqīyya?’ ‘To what extent does the attribution to Taqīyya align with the Fatwas (religious decrees) and narrative sources of the Ahl al-Sunna (Sunnis)?’ ‘Are the reconciliatory interpretations presented in this case considered arbitrary reconciliations or are they based on valid evidences and signs?’ Using a descriptive-analytical method and examining the book Tahdhīb al-Aḥkām, the researchers concluded that Shaykh Ṭūsī’s criteria for attributing a narration to Taqīyya are not solely limited to conformity with the views of the ‘Āmma (Sunnis); other standards also exist. With respect to the latter two questions, a specific case study was rigorously validated, and it was observed that in that instance, the attribution to Taqīyya based on conformity with the views of the ‘Āmma, and its reconciliatory interpretations, lack strong argumentative support. It appears that this method was predominantly adopted with the aim of reducing narrative conflicts. The authors' objective in presenting this case is to create a reasonable doubt regarding the Taqīyya-based attributions and reconciliatory interpretations proposed by Shaykh Ṭūsī, so that researchers avoid uninvestigated acceptance and analyze the narrations and viewpoints with greater scrutiny. This study demonstrates that Shaykh Ṭūsī utilized arbitrary reconciliation in presenting some of the reconciliatory interpretations.

Introduction

After people turned away from the Ahl al-Bayt (AS) and the divine Caliphate was diverted from its true path, the impeccable Imams (AS) resorted to the method of Taqīyya to preserve and safeguard the true principles and subsidiary rulings of Islam.

In Islamic culture, especially within the Shi'a denomination, Taqīyya means concealing one's religious beliefs in circumstances where expressing them could lead to dangers such as threats to the lives or property of Muslims (Shaykh Muḥīd, 1993 AD/1414 AH: 137). Therefore, attributing narrations to Taqīyya somehow demonstrates how religious teachings can be best utilized in difficult circumstances to prevent problems.

Consequently, the Imams (AS) sometimes used Taqīyya due to specific expediencies and unique situations, stating the actual ruling at another time and place, which caused apparent contradiction among different groups of narrations. Shaykh Ṭūsī, the author of a vast collection of Shi'a narrations with jurisprudential application, addressed these conflicts by identifying the Taqīyya-based narrations and attributing the conflicting narrations to Taqīyya, thus explaining their issuance as a result of dissimulation.

In this research, the authors intend to pursue three main goals by analyzing a number of instances where narrations were attributed to Taqīyya:

The first is to extract, analyze, and classify Shaykh Ṭūsī's criteria for attributing narrations to Taqīyya by utilizing evidence from the book Tahdhīb. The purpose of this section is to demonstrate that, from Shaykh Ṭūsī's perspective, the sole criterion for attributing a narration to Taqīyya was not merely conformity with the view of the Ahl al-Sunna, but that other factors and considerations were also influential in this process.

The second goal is the validation and examination of the content compliance of the narrations that were attributed to Taqīyya solely due to their conformity with the ʿĀmma. The authors endeavor to assess the degree of their conformity by comparing these narrations with the fatwas and narrative sources of the Ahl al-Sunna through a case study, verifying the existence of the ruling or conflicting narrations in the general jurisprudential and Ḥadīth sources, and consequently evaluating the correctness or incorrectness of these attributions.

The third goal is the validation of the reconciliatory interpretations stated beneath the narrations. Reconciliation among conflicting

84 narrations generally occurs in two ways:

First, reconciliation based on strong evidence and signs, which possesses high academic and argumentative validity, providing a logical and coherent explanation for the narrative conflict;

Second is arbitrary reconciliation, which is mostly used to avoid the problem of contradiction and conflict among narrations. This type of reconciliation has less logical soundness and is sometimes regarded as a temporary and non-systematic solution.

The authors have also critiqued some of the reconciliatory interpretations for the narrations in the case study through meticulous Ḥadīth and jurisprudential investigations. This examination is an effort to prove that such attributions and reconciliatory interpretations are not the result of precise analysis and methodical Ḥadīth attribution, but rather are seen more as a way of avoiding confrontation with conflicting narrations and the complexities of understanding them.

1. Research Background

The authors' search through articles, theses, and related sources led to the conclusion that four relevant articles have been written on this topic so far:

The first article, entitled "A Hypothesis on the Attribution of Narrations to Taqīyya from the Viewpoint of Shaykh Ṭūsī" (Madadi al-Musawī, 2013 AD/1393 SH), examines the criteria adopted by Shaykh Ṭūsī for attributing a narration to Taqīyya and its relationship with the preceding eras, seeking to discover the main reason for the difference between the two periods. The author believes that the difference between these two periods is due to Shaykh Ṭūsī's differing foundational principles from other jurists.

The second article, entitled "The Harmony of Attribution to Taqīyya with the Preferred Criteria of the Akḥbār 'Ilājīyya (Conflict-Resolving Narrations) in the Approach of Shaykh al-Ṭā'ifa" (Muharrami, Hasanzadeh, Pour Jamal, 2019 AD/1399 AH), analyzes Shaykh Ṭūsī's performance in attributing narrations to Taqīyya. The authors of this research, focusing on the order of preferences in the Maqbūlat 'Umar ibn Ḥanzala, consider Shaykh Ṭūsī's reasoning in attributing narrations to Taqīyya to be flawed and believe that Shaykh Ṭūsī lacks a specific criterion in choosing the preferences. They argue that, according to the Maqbūla, the preferences concerning issuance should take precedence over other preferences. The authors criticize Shaykh Ṭūsī's method by providing various examples.

The third article, entitled "Taqīyya and its Role in the Conflict of Narrations with a Focus on Shaykh Ṭūsī's Performance in al-Istibṣār," (Kazemi, Zare'i Madou'iyya, 2019 AD/1399 AH) initially discusses the linguistic and terminological interpretation of Taqīyya and its impact on creating conflict among narrations. It then enumerates the criteria for attributing a narration to Taqīyya, a list which appears to be incomplete. The authors believe that Shaykh Ṭūsī proceeded to resolve

Shaykh's work makes it unnecessary to refer to the rules of conflict resolution, as this perspective of Shaykh Ṭūsī is one step prior to applying the rules of conflict resolution.

The fourth article, entitled "The Effect of Conformity with the 'Āmma in Identifying Juristic Taqīyya Narrations," (Hamdullahi, Aref, 2022 AD/1401 AH) seeks to prove "Juristic Taqīyya" as a category of Taqīyya. The authors believe that the key indicator for identifying Juristic Taqīyya narrations is conformity with the 'Āmma.

The authors of the present article utilized a descriptive-analytical method to achieve their three aforementioned goals. To reduce the length of the article, the authors were compelled to omit the translation of some phrases and the Ḥadīth chain of authorities (Asānīd).

2. Criteria for Attribution to Taqīyya from the Viewpoint of *Shaykh Ṭūsī

Shaykh Ṭūsī sometimes attributed conflicting narrations to Taqīyya in his book Tahdhīb al-Aḥkām. However, the criteria he adopted for such attribution were not uniform and were not limited to the well-known criterion of conformity with the 'Āmma. Contrary to expectation, he did not merely suffice with the criterion of agreement between the narration and the fatwas and ḥadīths of the Ahl al-Sunna, but in some cases, he attributed the conflicting narration to Taqīyya based on other criteria as well. In this article, the authors will present a list of these criteria and discuss a prominent example.

2-1. Fear or Adherence to the Ruler of the Time

In the chapter on "Supplements to the Jurisprudence of Marriage" (Min al-Ziyādāt fī Fiqh al-Nikāḥ) in Kitāb al-Nikāḥ, Shaykh Ṭūsī recounts a narration from Imam Kāẓim (AS) concerning the ruling on women observing ḥijāb (veiling) when an eunuch enters upon them, which prohibits the eunuch from looking at the woman's hair and beard, and necessitates the observance of ḥijāb. He then narrates another ḥadīth from Imam Riḍā (AS) that suggests the permissibility of looking and the non-necessity of ḥijāb for women upon the entry of a eunuch.

The report is as follows: "And from him, from Muḥammad ibn Ismā'īl, who said: "I asked Abū al-Ḥasan (AS) about the head-covering of free women from eunuchs." He said: "They used to enter upon the daughters of Abū Ḥasan (AS) and they would not cover their heads."

Muḥammad ibn al-Ḥasan said: "This narration was issued in the manner of Taqīyya, and the practice is according to the first narration. The permissibility in the second narration was granted due to Taqīyya from the ruler of the time."

The Shaykh attributed the second narration to Taqīyya. He believes this narration was issued due to fear of the ruler of the time. Evidence supporting this is that immediately after narrating this ḥadīth, Shaykh Ṭūsī mentions another narration that can be considered as evidence for the Taqīyya nature of the previous narration.

when he (AS) was asked about that, he said: Hold back from this and did not answer him. And this indicates what we mentioned of Taqīyya." (Ṭūsī, 1986 AD/1407 AH (a): 7, 480)

2-2. Contradiction with the Qur'an

In our narrative sources, contradiction with the Qur'an is presented as a criterion for identifying unauthentic ḥadīths (Kashshī, 1988 AD/1409 AH: 224).

In the chapter on "The Description of Wuḍū (Ablution), its Obligatory, Sunna, and Preferred Parts" (Ṣifāt al-Wuḍū' wa al-Farḍ Minhu wa al-Sunna wa al-Faḍīla Fīhi) in Kitāb al-Ṭahāra, the late Shaykh Ṭūsī narrates a ḥadīth that indicates the necessity of wiping the ears in Wuḍū. Subsequently, he narrates another ḥadīth that rules the necessity of wiping the back of the head in Wuḍū.

Shaykh Ṭūsī's report in Tahdhīb is:

"He said: I asked Abū 'Abdillāh (AS): "Are the ears part of the head?" He said: "Yes." I said: "So, when I wipe my head, do I wipe my ears?" He said: "Yes." It is as if I am looking at my father, and on his neck there was a fold of skin, and he used to shave his head when he cut his hair; it is as if I am looking at him and the water is flowing down his neck."

"And what he also narrated from Faḍāla from al-Ḥusayn ibn Abī al-'Alā', who said: Abū 'Abdillāh (AS) said: "Wipe the head on its front and its back."

"So, they are attributed to Taqīyya because they contradict the Qur'an, as we mentioned." (Ṭūsī, 1986 AD/1407 AH (a): 1, 62)

Shaykh, by considering the verse of Wuḍū (al-Mā'ida: 6) and the narrations issued in its interpretation, deemed these two narrations to be in opposition to the teachings of the Book of God and considered them to be in conflict with the Qur'an.

Another example related to this is found in the book Tahdhīb (Ṭūsī, 1986 AD/1407 AH: 1, 280). This action by the Shaykh in attributing narrations that contradict the Qur'an to Taqīyya shows that his perspective in this attribution was beyond mere conformity with the Āmma.

2-3. Contradiction with Consensus

From the perspective of Shaykh Ṭūsī, the consensus of Muslims, especially the correct sect (Shi'a), is one of the fundamental criteria for accepting narrations and acting upon their content (Ṭūsī, 1969 AD/1390 AH: 1, 4).

In the chapter on "The Number of Sections of Adhān (Call to Prayer) and Iqāma (Second Call to Prayer) and their Description" (‘Adad Fuṣūl al-Adhān wa al-Iqāma wa Waṣfihimā) in Kitāb al-Ṣalāt, he initially narrates two ḥadīths that consider the phrase "al-Ṣalātu Khayrun min al-Nawm" (Prayer is better than sleep) to be part of the Sunna.

The two reports are:

"As for what was narrated... from Abī Baṣīr from Abū ‘Abdillāh (AS), he said: "The call and the Tathwīb (the aforementioned phrase) in the Iqāma are from the Sunna."

"And what was narrated... Muḥammad ibn Muslim from Abū Ja'far (AS), he said: "My father used to call out al-Ṣalātu Khayrun min al-Nawm in his house..." (Ṭūsī: 1986 AD/1407 AH (a): 2, 62)

The Shaykh, considering the consensus of the Shi'a sect on omitting this phrase in the Adhān, attributed these two narrations to Taqīyya.

His statement in Tahdhīb is: "And what resembles these two ḥadīths that include the mention of these phrases, they are attributed to Taqīyya due to the consensus of the sect on abandoning practice with them." (ibid.)

In another section of Tahdhīb, the late Shaykh Ṭūsī also attributed a narration to Taqīyya simply because it was unique (shādh) and contradicted the Mashhūr (well-known) and the consensus of the true sect. In the second volume of Tahdhīb, Kitāb al-Ṣalāt, page 75, he attributed a ḥadīth indicating that the person praying behind the Imam should say "Āmīn" after the end of Sūrah al-Ḥamd to Taqīyya due to the uniqueness of the narration (contradiction with consensus and the well-known view).

2-4. Conformity with the Fatwas of the First Two Caliphs

Revocable divorce is a type of divorce where, after the specific formula is pronounced, a period called Idda (waiting period) begins. During this time, the woman cannot marry another man, and the husband has the right to revoke the divorce and restore the marital relationship. If the man revokes the divorce, he still retains the right to divorce her twice more. If the man does not revoke the divorce and the Idda ends, the woman can marry another man.

The question raised is: If the woman marries another man after the Idda ends, then separates from her second husband and returns to her former husband with a new contract, how many times can this man divorce her?

Shaykh Ṭūsī includes two narrations in Tahdhīb that state the man has the right to two divorces remaining.

The report is: "From Abū Ja'far (AS) that Ali (AS) used to say concerning a man who divorces his wife once, then marries her after another husband, that she is with him according to what remained of her divorces."

"...He said: "I said to him: "It has been narrated from Abū 'Abdillāh (AS) concerning a man who divorces his wife according to the Book and the Sunna, and she separates from him with one [divorce], and she marries another husband, and he dies or divorces her, and she returns to her first husband, that she is with him for two divorces, and one has passed." He wrote: "They spoke the truth." (ibid: 8, 34)

Subsequently, he attributes these two narrations to Taqīyya. He believes this Fatwa was issued in adherence to the second Caliph, as he had initiated such an innovation. Shaykh Ṭūsī, in this context, narrates a ḥadīth as evidence to confirm his attribution.

92 His statement in Tahdhīb is as follows: "The second perspective regarding the narrations we presented is that they are attributed to a type of Taqīyya, because it is the doctrine of 'Umar, and it is possible that the situation necessitated him (AS) to give a Fatwa that conforms with his doctrine. What indicates this is what was narrated... from 'Amr ibn Thābit from 'Abdillāh ibn 'Aqīl ibn Abī Ṭālib, who said: "Two men disagreed over the judgment of Ali (AS) and 'Umar concerning a woman whom her husband divorced once or twice, and she married another, and he divorced her or died, and when her 'Idda ended, the first [husband] married her." 'Umar said: "She is with him according to what remained of the divorces." And Amīr al-Mu'minīn (Ali) (AS) said: "Glory be to God, does it nullify three but not nullify one?" (ibid: 32)

Shaykh provided another example of this criterion in the discussion of inheritance. He narrated two ḥadīths, and then, considering their contradiction with another set of narrations, he attributed their issuance to adherence to the judgment of the first Caliph (ibid: 9, 313).

2-5. Conformity with the Views of the 'Āmma

The criterion of conformity with the views of the 'Āmma (Sunnis) is one of the important indicators in the process of narrative validation, which the Ahl al-Bayt (AS) taught their companions, especially for the correct understanding and interpretation of ḥadīths.

In a narration from Imam Ṣādiq (AS), it is stated: "From Abū 'Abdillāh (AS), he said: "What you hear from me that resembles the 93 saying of the people (al-nās, i.e., the 'Āmma'), there is Taqīyya in it, and what you hear from me that does not resemble the saying of the people, there is no Taqīyya in it." (ibid: 8, 98)

In this ḥadīth, the Imam (AS), while instructing his companions, reminds them that fatwas that conform to the view of the 'Āmma from the impeccable Imams (AS) are, in many cases, a result of Taqīyya. This instruction from the Imam (AS) implicitly emphasizes the necessity for Muḥaddithūn (hadith narrators) and jurists to be aware of the fatwas of the 'Āmma and their different opinions in jurisprudential fields and the actions of the legally obligated. Naturally, this creates an academic responsibility for the Muḥaddithūn, as they need to have sufficient knowledge of the jurisprudential views of other schools and denominations, in addition to a precise understanding of the religious texts, in order to correctly analyze the narrations.

Shaykh Ṭūsī, as one of the greatest Shi'a jurists with a special mastery over the fatwas of the 'Āmma, sought to resolve the narrative conflicts. Especially in cases where narrations were consistent with the views of the 'Āmma, he interpreted those narrations based on the concept of Taqīyya. In his book Tahdhīb, he used various phrases to express this matter, which indicates his precision and deep knowledge in applying narrations to the views of the 'Āmma and his accurate understanding of the discussions on Taqīyya.

to Taqīyya are mainly as follows:

- "Li'anna Dhālika Madhhab Ba'd al-Āmma" (Because that is the doctrine of some of the Āmma);
- "Muwāfiq li Madhhab aw li Madhāhib Ba'd al-Āmma" (Conforming to the doctrine or doctrines of some of the Āmma);
- "Muwāfiq li al-Āmma" (Conforming to the Āmma);
- "Yuwāfiq al-Āmma" (Conforms to the Āmma);
- "Muwāfiq li Madhhab aw Madhāhib Kathīr al-Āmma" (Conforming to the doctrine or doctrines of many of the Āmma);
- "Muwāfiq li Qawl al-Āmma" (Conforming to the saying of the Āmma);
- "Muwāfiq li Ba'd al-Āmma" (Conforming to some of the Āmma);
- "Dhālika Madhhab Ba'd Fuqahā' al-Āmma" (That is the doctrine of some of the jurists of the Āmma).

Although these phrases may initially appear to be merely stylistic variations, a closer examination reveals that they demonstrate Shaykh Ṭūsī's depth and academic precision in recognizing and mastering the views and jurisprudential Fatwas of the Āmma and his extensive awareness of their various schools and sects.

It is worth mentioning that Shaykh al-Ṭā'ifā sometimes attributed a narration to Taqīyya by considering the Sunni narrators present in the Isnād (chain of narration) (For example cf. ibid: 1, 32 and 59; 6, 168; 7, 317; 9, 368).

This approach shows that the Shaykh's view in identifying the views of the 'Āmma went beyond conformity with their fatwas and included analytical studies of the Isnād. However, in two cases, although a Sunni narrator was present in the Isnād, Taqīyya was not mentioned, and the narration was rejected and set aside (ibid: 4, 316; 9, 41).

Shaykh Tūsī, in the eighth chapter of Kitāb al-Ṣalāt, narrates a collection of ḥadīths to prove that the Night Prayer is performed in sets of two separate Rak'ahs. He even rules that it is not permissible to omit the Salām (salutation) between the Shaf' (two Rak'ahs) and Witr (one Rak'ah) prayers. However, he then narrates the following three ḥadīths that contradict this rule:

1. "...He said: "I asked Abū 'Abdillāh (AS) about the Taslīm (salutation) in the two Rak'ahs of Witr." He said: "If you wish, you may salute, and if you wish, you may not salute."
2. "...He said: "I said to Abū 'Abdillāh (AS): "Should I salute in the two Rak'ahs of Witr?" He said: "If you wish, you may salute, and if you wish, you may not salute."
3. "...He said: "I asked Al-'Abd al-Ṣāliḥ (AS) about the Witr prayer." He said: "Join it (Ṣilḥū)."

After narrating these three ḥadīths, he attempts to resolve the conflict among them and proposes three reconciliatory interpretations beneath them. In one of these interpretations, he states: "And it is permissible that these narrations were issued in the manner of Taqīyya because they conform to the doctrines of the 'Āmma and what is issued in this manner should not be acted upon." (ibid.)

What is clearly understood from this statement is his explicit affirmation of the conformity of these narrations with the view of a considerable number of the Ahl al-Sunna, to the extent that he considers this fatwa to be consistent with the doctrine of a large group of them.

1. Validation of the Attribution of Narrations to Taqīyya

Based on the authors' studies and investigations, the majority of cases of attribution to Taqīyya in Tahdhīb are based on the conformity of these narrations with the views and fatwas of the 'Āmma. However, this necessitates a precise validation process; a process in which the degree of alignment of these conflicting narrations with the rulings or narrations found in the jurisprudential and Ḥadīth sources of the 'Āmma is systematically examined, and consequently, the correctness or incorrectness of these attributions is critiqued.

It is essential to examine whether such attributions are the product of academic analysis and conformity with the principles of methodical Ḥadīth attribution, or merely a strategy to avoid narrative conflict and the complexities of understanding them. The authors believe that Shaykh Ṭūsī's academic standing and his mastery over the views of the Ahl al-Sunna are beyond any doubt or dispute. Nevertheless, it is possible that in some of his analyses regarding Taqīyya-based attributions, the desired precision was not fully observed. Therefore, in order to create a reasonable doubt concerning these attributions and reconciliatory interpretations, the most recent example will be examined and validated. This is so that researchers exercise greater reflection in accepting such attributions.

To validate the reconciliatory interpretations presented and this specific attribution, we are obliged to undergo three stages to reveal the criteria for attribution to Taqīyya and the reconciliatory interpretations.

3-1. Stage One: Examination of the Most Important and Earliest Ḥadīth Collections of the ‘*Āmma

Since Shaykh Ṭūsī attributed some conflicting narrations to their conformity with the ‘Āmma, it is necessary to ascertain the view of the ‘Āmma on this matter to reveal the extent of the validity of this attribution. For this purpose, we searched for the discussed topic in three authoritative narrative-jurisprudential books of the ‘Āmma and present the results to the readers.

1) *Ṣaḥīḥ al-Bukhārī

Ṣaḥīḥ Bukhārī is one of the most authoritative Ḥadīth sources of the Ahl al-Sunna, compiled by Muḥammad ibn Ismā’īl al-Bukhārī (d. 256 AH), and holds a special position among jurists and Muḥaddithūn as one of the two main Ḥadīth references of the Ahl al-Sunna. In the chapter on "Ṣalāt al-Witr," Bukhārī narrated with his Isnād from Ibn ‘Abbās that he observed the Prophet's (PBUH) worship one night, and

98 in describing that night with full details, he said:

"...Then he performed Wuḍū (ablution) and perfected the Wuḍū... Then he prayed two Rak'ahs, then two Rak'ahs, then two Rak'ahs, then two Rak'ahs, then two Rak'ahs, then two Rak'ahs, and then he performed Witr... Then he left and performed the Fajr (morning) prayer." (Bukhārī, 1989 AD/1410 AH: 2, 219)

2) Ṣaḥīḥ Muslim

Ṣaḥīḥ Muslim, after Ṣaḥīḥ Bukhārī, is considered one of the most authoritative narrative-jurisprudential books among the Ahl al-Sunna. This Ḥadīth collection was compiled by Muslim ibn al-Ḥajjāj al-Qushayrī al-Nīsābūrī (d. 261 AH).

In the chapter on "The Night Prayer and the Number of Rak'ahs of the Prophet (PBUH) at Night, and that Witr is One Rak'ah, and that One Rak'ah is a Valid Prayer," (Ṣalāt al-Layl wa 'Adad Raka'āt al-Nabī fī al-Layl, wa Anna al-Witr Rak'a, wa Anna al-Rak'a Ṣalāt Ṣaḥīḥa) Muslim narrates the following two ḥadīths:

1. "...From 'Ā'isha: "The Messenger of Allāh used to pray eleven Rak'ahs at night, performing Witr with one of them."
2. "And... from 'Ā'isha... she said: "The Messenger of Allāh used to pray, between finishing the 'Ishā' prayer (which people call al-'Atama) until the Fajr (dawn), eleven Rak'ahs." He would salute between every two Rak'ahs, and perform Witr with one." (Muslim, 1991 AD/1412 AH: 1, 508)

It is noteworthy that the first mentioned narration is also reported in the book al-Muwaṭṭa' by Mālik ibn Anas (d. 179 AH), one of the earliest narrative sources of the Ahl al-Sunna, in the chapter on "Ṣalāt al-Layl." (Mālik, 1993 AD/1414 AH: 159)

3) Musnad Aḥmad ibn Ḥanbal

Musnad Aḥmad ibn Ḥanbal, the most famous work of Aḥmad ibn Ḥanbal Baghdādī (d. 241 AH), is considered one of the important works of the Ahl al-Sunna. He narrated in the Musnad of ʿAbdullāh ibn ʿUmar as follows:

"From Ibn ʿUmar: When he was asked about Witr, he said: As for me, if I perform Witr before sleeping, and then I wish to pray at night, I would make an even number of the Witr that has passed with one Rakʿah, then I would pray two Rakʿahs at a time, two Rakʿahs at a time. Then, when I finish my prayer, I would perform Witr with one Rakʿah..." (Ibn Ḥanbal, 1995 AD/1416 AH: 10, 329)

The examination of the authoritative Ḥadīth collections of the Ahl al-Sunna, which hold a special status and credibility among them, clearly shows that the issue of the Night Prayers being two Rakʿahs at a time, the Shafʿ prayer being two Rakʿahs, and the Witr prayer being a single Rakʿah, along with the necessity of separation between them, is explicitly stated in these sources. Furthermore, these narrations were reported by some of the most prominent narrators of the Ahl al-Sunna, such as ʿAbdullāh ibn ʿAbbās, ʿAbdullāh ibn ʿUmar, and ʿĀʿisha, the wife of the Prophet (PBUH); narrators whose traditions are of a high degree of trustworthiness among the scholars of the Ahl al-Sunna.

It should be noted that there are narrations in the Ḥadīth collections of the ʿĀmma that refer to the combined Shafʿ and Witr prayers as the Witr prayer (Ibn Ḥanbal, 1995 AD/1416 AH: 4, 457).

We will explain later that this category of narrations is the basis for the ruling on the necessity of joining Shafʿ and Witr without the permissibility of a Taslīm between them. However, it seems that the word "Witr" is a general title that includes the Night Prayer (Nawāfil al-Layl) and the Witr prayer specifically.

Evidence for this statement is the narration: "The Messenger of Allāh (PBUH) said: "The Witr is a right upon every Muslim." So, whoever wishes to perform Witr with five, let him do so, and whoever wishes to perform Witr with three, let him do so, and whoever wishes to perform Witr with one, let him do so." (Abī Dāwūd, 1999 AD/1420 AH: 2, 618)

3-2. Stage Two: Examination of Some of the Most Famous Jurisprudential Books of the Four Schools

In this section, the authors analyze and examine the most important jurisprudential and Fatwa sources of the four schools of the Ahl al-Sunna regarding this matter. The main goal of this examination is to assess the validity and robustness of the reconciliatory interpretations presented by Shaykh Ṭūsī beneath those three narrations. The jurisprudential views of these schools are presented in alphabetical order.

1) Ḥanbalī

Ibn Qudāma (d. 620 AH), one of the most famous Ḥanbalī jurists, discussed this matter in detail in his well-known book al-Mughnī. His statement contains two main points that can be inferred:

First, the author issued a fatwa regarding the performance of the Witr prayer as one Rak'ah. Ibn Qudāma said: "Issue: He said: (And Witr is one Rak'ah). Aḥmad explicitly stated this, saying: We adopt the view that Witr is one Rak'ah..."

Second, he enumerated a considerable number of Companions who held the same view as the Ḥanbalī School's Fatwa and confirmed this view by citing the Fatwas of jurists such as Mālik, Shāfi'ī, and Awzā'ī (Ibn Qudāma, 1968 AD/1388 AH: 2, 110). He also did not mention the necessity of joining the two prayers or even the option of joining them.

2) Ḥanafī

Muḥammad ibn Ḥasan Shaybānī (d. 189 AH), a student of Abū Ḥanīfa, reported in his book al-Āthār (a Ḥadīth book), in the chapter on Witr in Kitāb al-Ṣalāt, as follows: "From 'Umar ibn al-Khaṭṭāb that he said: "I would not like that I leave Witr with three Rak'ahs, even if I were given red camels (a great fortune)." "Muḥammad said: "And we adopt this. Witr is three Rak'ahs, and there is no separation between them with a Taslīm. And it is the saying of Abū Ḥanīfa." (al-

In this brief statement, Shaybānī pointed out three key points: First, he attributes the basis of the Ḥanafīs' Fatwa regarding the non-permissibility of separation to the narration of the second Caliph. Second, he clearly expresses the Fatwa of the Ḥanafī School using the phrase "Wa bihi Na'khudh" (And we adopt this). Third, he considers Abū Ḥanīfa's opinion on this matter to be in conformity with the narration of ʿUmar.

Furthermore, Burhān al-Dīn ʿAlī ibn Abī Bakr Marghīnānī (d. 593 AH), a prominent Ḥanafī jurist, explicitly stated two important issues from the words of Abū Ḥanīfa in his jurisprudential work al-Hidāya, Sharḥ Bidāyat al-Mubtadī, in the chapter on "Ṣalāt al-Witr."

First, according to Abū Ḥanīfa, he considered the Witr prayer to be a religious obligation and a Sunna (a rank lower than an obligatory duty). Second, he expressed Abū Ḥanīfa's Fatwa regarding the manner of performing these three Rakʿahs as follows: "He said: The Witr is three Rakʿahs, and there is no separation between them with a Salām."

The Witr prayer consists of three continuous Rakʿahs with no Salām given between them. He then presents the basis for Abū Ḥanīfa's Fatwa, saying: "Because ʿĀ'isha narrated that the Prophet (PBUH) used to perform Witr with three." (Marghīnānī, 1989 AD/1410 AH: 1, 70 and 71)

3) ḥāfiʿī

The book Al-Umm, authored by Muḥammad ibn Idrīs al-Shāfiʿī (d. 103 204 AH), is one of the main and authoritative sources of Shāfi'ī jurisprudence, containing the fatwas of the founder of this school. In the chapter on "What is narrated about Witr with One Rak'ah" (Mā Jā'a fī al-Witr bi-Rak'a Wāḥida) in Kitāb al-Ṣalāt, as the title of the chapter suggests, he distinguished between the Shaf' and Witr prayers and issued a fatwa on the permissibility of performing the Witr prayer as a single independent Rak'ah (Shāfi'ī, n.d.: 1, 140).

This jurisprudential view of Shāfi'ī was also transmitted by Ibn Rushd al-Qurṭubī (d. 595 AH) in his book Bidāyat al-Mujtahid wa Nihāyat al-Muqtaṣid, in the chapter on "al-Qawl fī al-Witr", as follows: "And Shāfi'ī said: Witr is one Rak'ah" (Ibn Rushd al-Qurṭubī, Bidāyat al-Mujtahid wa Nihāyat al-Muqtaṣid) (Qurṭubī, 2011 AD/1432 AH: 2, 66).

It is worth noting that Shāfi'ī also considers the performance of supererogatory prayers (Nawāfil) with more than two Rak'ahs to be permissible, provided that the Tashahhud (testification) is recited after every two Rak'ahs without a Salām. However, he states that completing the prayer with a salām after every two Rak'ahs is superior (Ṭūsī, 1986 AD/1407 AH (b): 1, 527).

Abū Zakariyyā Muḥyī al-Dīn Nawawī (d. 676 AH), in his book al-Majmū' (one of the important jurisprudential sources in the Shāfi'ī school), in the chapter on "Ṣalāt al-Taṭawwu' (Supererogatory Prayer)", issued a fatwa that is slightly different from al-Shāfi'ī's view,

104 considering the Witr prayer to be an emphasized *Sunna** that can be performed as a single Rak‘ah. After ruling in favor of the superiority of saluting after every two Rak‘ahs, he subsequently ruled as follows: "If he intends to combine them with a single Tashahhud at the end of all of them, it is permissible. And if he intends them with two Tashahhuds and a single Salām, sitting in the last and the one before it, it is permissible." (Nawawī, n.d.: 4, 17)

4) Mālikī

Alī ibn Khalaf al-Manūfī Mālikī (d. 939 AH), in Kifāyat al-Ṭālib al-Rabbānī, in the chapter on "The Ruling of Shaf’ and Witr and their Description" (Ḥukm al-Shaf’ wa al-Witr wa Ṣifātihiṁā), said: "Then, after he performs the two Rak‘ahs of Shaf’, he performs the Witr... and the best, as will follow, is that it be a single Rak‘ah immediately following the Shaf’." (Manūfī, 1988 AD/1409 AH: 552)

Therefore, the Mālikī school rules in favor of separation between these two prayers and the performance of the Witr prayer as a single Rak‘ah. It was previously mentioned that Ibn Qudāma attributed the same fatwa to Mālik.

The search in the narrative and jurisprudential books of the ‘Āmma has concluded. To complete the research, al-Khilāf (The Disagreement), a book by Shaykh Ṭūsī, was consulted. The author, in a section of this book, examines the fatwas and views of the ‘Āmma regarding supererogatory prayers (Nawāfil) and also presents the views of the Shi'a school on this matter.

After the Shi'a Fatwa, Shaykh Ṭūsī presented the view of Shāfi'ī. Shāfi'ī issued a three-stage Fatwa concerning supererogatory prayers: first, he said the best is to pray two Rak'ahs at a time; then he said one can join more than two Rak'ahs, provided the Tashahhud is recited after every two Rak'ahs without a Salām; and finally, he issued a Fatwa that one can pray four to ten Rak'ahs together without reciting the Tashahhud, and recite the Tashahhud and give the Salām in the last Rak'ah.

Shaykh al-Ṭā'ifa also considered Mālik to be of the same opinion as Shāfi'ī. However, Abū Ḥanīfa also gave the same opinion with a slight difference (Ṭūsī, 1986 AD/1407 AH (b): 1, 527).

Then, in another section of al-Khilāf, he explained the manner of Night Prayer according to the four schools. In this section, Shaykh Ṭūsī addressed the difference of opinion between Abū Ḥanīfa and Thawrī and the other schools regarding the manner of performing the three Rak'ahs of Shaf' and Witr. He considered Mālik and Shāfi'ī to be in agreement with the Shi'a view, but considered Abū Ḥanīfa and Sufyān Thawrī, two jurists of the 'Āmma, to be the only jurists who issued a Fatwa on the necessity of joining Shaf' and Witr, because they do not consider a single Rak'ah to be a valid prayer.

3-3. Stage Three: Examination of Shi'a Narrative and Jurisprudential Books

proposed a reconciliatory interpretation. In this interpretation, he stated: "For these narrations do not contradict what we mentioned, because they include the option of Taslīm, and whoever says to join it, does not permit Taslīm in it in any manner; and since there is an option in them, we attribute it to the specific Taslīm, which is that in our view, whoever says "al-Salām ‘Alaynā wa ‘alā ‘Ibādillāh al-Ṣāliḥīn" in the Tashahhud, his prayer has ended. If he says, after that, "al-Salām ‘Alaykum wa Raḥmatullāh," it is permissible, and if he does not say it, it is also permissible. So, the option only concerned this type of Taslīm. And if there was an explicit prohibition of Taslīm in them, it would not be obligatory to act upon them, because the ḥadīths that we established for the obligation of Taslīm are more numerous, and it is not permissible to abandon the more numerous for the less numerous except with evidence that prevents it." (Ṭūsī, 1986 AD/1407 AH: 2, 129)

Shaykh Ṭūsī, in this statement, suggests that the narrations under discussion could refer to the permissibility of option in giving the Salām between the Shaf‘ and Witr prayers. This means that the intended Salām is the specific Salām of "al-Salām ‘Alaynā wa ‘alā ‘Ibādillāh al-Ṣāliḥīn," which concludes the prayer. He then explicitly states that whoever believes in the non-permissibility of Taslīm between these two prayers should not give the Salām. Finally, he emphasizes that the view of prohibiting Taslīm is unacceptable because the fatwa of prohibition, in comparison with the narrations indicating the obligation of Salām, lacks validity and authority.

4. Review and Evaluation of the Reconciliatory Interpretation Presented by the Shaykh

When Shaykh Ṭūsī speaks of the view of option in Taslīm and the view of joining the two prayers without Salām, he should have, if they existed, introduced the Shi'a Muḥaddithūn or jurists who held such an opinion. However, he did not do this. Therefore, the authors, focusing on Shi'a narrative and jurisprudential sources, compiled the views and fatwas of jurists before the sixth century AH to systematically evaluate the basis of this reconciliatory interpretation.

This examination was conducted to discover the possible existence of similar reconciliatory interpretations or similarities in the fatwas and transmission of ḥadīths before Shaykh Ṭūsī, to determine whether Shaykh Ṭūsī was the innovator of these interpretations or if they were derived from the principles of his predecessors. Furthermore, this process also aims to broadly and systematically explain the approach of jurists of the first six centuries in dealing with this collection of narrations and to provide a framework for the re-examination and validation of the attribution to Taqīyya.

The late Kulaynī (d. 329 AH), in al-Kāfī, in the chapter on "Ṣalāt al-Nawāfil", presented a collection of narrations that, by their explicit or implicit meaning, indicate the separation between Shaf' and Witr;

108 and in these narrations, there is no mention of the option in taslīm or the necessity of joining (Kulaynī, 1986 AD/1407 AH: 3, 442).

Qādī Ibn Ḥayyūn Maghribī (d. 363 AH), in his book Ta'wīl al-Da'ā'im, in the ninth session of the sixth volume, chapter on "Mentioning the Sunna Prayer," (Fī Dhikr al-Ṣalāt al-Sunna) explicitly stated the separation between the two prayers of Shaf' and Witr (Ibn Ḥayyūn, n.d.: 1, 358).

The late Ṣadūq (d. 381 AH), in his book al-Muqni' (a book of transmitted jurisprudence), in the chapter on "Ṣalāt al-Layl," stated: "And separate between Shaf' and Witr with a Taslīma." (Ṣadūq, 1994 AD/1415 AH: 133) This statement confirms that the late Ṣadūq based his understanding of the narrations of this chapter on the separation and distinction between Shaf' and Witr, and he accepted this category of narrations. It is worth mentioning that he explicitly stated in the introduction of the book that what he narrates is mostly ḥadīths from which he has only removed the chains of authorities (Asānīd) (ibid: 5).

The late Shaykh Muḥīd (d. 413 AH), in his book al-Muqni'a, after explaining the manner of the five daily prayers and their supererogatory prayers and mentioning the recommended acts, when he discusses the Night Prayer, he ruled, like the late Ṣadūq, in favor of separation and distinction between the two prayers of Shaf' and Witr (Muḥīd, 1989 AD/1410 AH: 123).

The late Abū al-Ṣalāḥ Ḥalabī (d. 447 AH), in his jurisprudential work al-Kāfi fī al-Fiqh (Ḥalabī, n.d.: 159), and the late Sallār 109

Daylamī (d. 448 AH), in his book al-Marāsim (Sallār 1983 AD/1404 AH: 81), both agreed on the necessity of separation between these two prayers.

On the other hand, the late Shaykh Ṭūsī (d. 460 AH), in his Fatwa book, al-Nihāya fī Mujarrad al-Fiqh wa al-Fatwā (Ṭūsī, 1979 AD/1400 AH: 120), explicitly ruled in favor of the separation of the Shaf' prayer from the Witr prayer.

Qāḍī Ibn Barrāj (d. 481 AH) adopted the same view in al-Muhadhdhab (Ibn Barrāj, 1985 AD/1406 AH: 1, 135).

Ibn Idrīs Ḥillī (d. 597 AH), in his prominent jurisprudential work al-Sarā'ir, in the chapter on "The Number of Prayers and the Number of their Rak'ahs, Obligatory and Recommended," (A'dād al-Ṣalāt wa 'Adad Raka'ātihā min al-Mifrūḍ wa al-Masnūn) explicitly states that the Night Prayer consists of eleven Rak'ahs, and in every two Rak'ahs, one Tashahhud and Salām must be recited. He further emphasizes that all supererogatory prayers must be performed in this manner, and no change or modification is permissible in this regard (Ibn Idrīs 1980 AD/1401 AH: 1, 193).

4-1. Results of the Validation of Attribution to Taqīyya and Reconciliatory Interpretations

Following the meticulous examination of the different stages, the results are presented, taking into account each sentence of the

1) Shaykh Ṭūsī, initially, when reconciling these narrations, explicitly stated that the sum of these three narrations ruled in favor of the option of Salām between Shaf' and Witr. This is despite the fact that none of the Shi'a jurists before Shaykh Ṭūsī accepted such a theory. This is because, in the Shi'a school, supererogatory and Nawāfil prayers are performed only as two Rak'ahs at a time, with a Salām after the Tashahhud of the second Rak'ah. Moreover, the permissibility of performing Witr as a single Rak'ah is established by certain evidence. Therefore, this reconciliatory interpretation is mostly evaluated as an arbitrary reconciliation.

2) Subsequently, Shaykh Ṭūsī stated: "Wa man yaqūlu bi ṣilatihā fa innahu lā Yujawwiz al-taslīm fīhā 'alā Wajhin" (And whoever says to join it, does not permit taslīm in it in any manner). In this statement, he referred to the proponents of joining, but did not specify who these people are. As mentioned, only two of the 'Āmma jurists—namely Abū Ḥanīfa and Sufyān al-Thawrī—believe in the necessity of joining the two prayers of Shaf' and Witr, because they do not consider a single Rak'ah prayer to be permissible. Therefore, given the impossibility of attributing this interpretation to Taqīyya, this reconciliation is also considered an arbitrary reconciliation, as there is no clear evidence for it; rather, the well-known view among the Ahl al-Sunna is the permissibility of Taslīm between them.

3) The continuation of Shaykh Ṭūsī's statement is: "Wa idhā Kāna fīhā al-Ikhtiyār fa Naḥnu Naḥmiluhu... Hādhā al-Ḍarb min al-Taslīm" 111

(And since there is an option in them, we attribute it... to this type of Taslīm). This statement has no evidence in any of the narrative and jurisprudential books of both the Shi'a and Sunni schools. Therefore, this reconciliatory interpretation is completely arbitrary (Tabarru 'ī) and without any evidence or proof.

4) Shaykh Ṭūsī's statement: "Wa law Kāna fīhā Ṣarīḥ bi al-Nahy 'an al-Taslīm lam Yajib al-'Amal bihā li anna mā Athbatnāhu fī Wujūb al-Taslīm min al-Akḥbār Akthar wa lā Yajūz al-'Udūl 'an al-Akthar ilā al-Aqall illā li Dalīl Yamna 'minhu" (And if there was an explicit prohibition of Taslīm in them, it would not be obligatory to act upon them, because the ḥadīths that we established for the obligation of Taslīm are more numerous, and it is not permissible to abandon the more numerous for the less numerous except with evidence that prevents it), is completely correct, and both schools agree on this statement.

5) Subsequently, Shaykh Ṭūsī stated: "Wa Yajūz an Takūna Hādhihi al-Akḥbār Kharajat 'alā ṭarīq al-Taḳīyya li annahā Muwāfiqat li Madhāhib al-'Āmma wa mā Yakhruju 'alā Hādihā al-Wajh lā Yajib al-'amal bihī" (And it is permissible that these narrations were issued in the manner of Taḳīyya because they conform to the doctrines of the 'Āmma, and what is issued in this manner should not be acted upon). This statement of Shaykh Ṭūsī is criticizable from two aspects: "First, as stated, the permissibility of joining belongs to the Shāfi'ī school, and the necessity of joining belongs to the Ḥanaḥī school." However, Shaykh Ṭūsī performed the reconciliation among the narrations without referring to the Fatwas of these two schools. Second, Shaykh Ṭūsī stated that the ruling in these three narrations conforms to the "Doctrines" of the ʿĀmma. In reality, only Abū Ḥanīfa and Sufyān al-Thawrī believe in the necessity of joining, and the Shāfi'īs prioritize separation. Therefore, the use of the word "doctrines" in the plural form is not precise and appropriate.

- 6) Shaykh Ṭūsī, at the end of his discussion on Taqīyya, stated: "Wa mā Yakhruju ʿalā Hādhā al-Wajh lā Yajib al-ʿAmal bihī" (And what is issued in this manner should not be acted upon). The implication of this is the non-authority of this category of narrations. And what lacks authority is set aside, and there is no need to reconcile it with conflicting narrations.

Conclusion

- 1) Shaykh Ṭūsī, in Tahdhīb al-Aḥkām, attributed some narrations to Taqīyya to resolve the conflict among them.
- 2) He considered the criteria for attribution to Taqīyya to be multiple standards, including the conformity of the narration with the fatwas of the Ahl al-Sunna, fear of the ruler, contradiction with the Qur'an, contradiction with Ijmāʿ (consensus), and conformity with the Fatwas of the first two Caliphs.
- 3) The Shaykh, with his deep mastery over Sunni jurisprudence, used 113 diverse phrases in his attempt to resolve narrative conflicts that aligned with the views of the ‘Āmma, and this variety of expression stems from his precision.

- 4) By examining a case study from Tahdhīb al-Aḥkām, the authors aimed to create a logical conjecture to prove that some of the Shaykh's Taqīyya-based attributions are solely based on the conformity of the narration with some views of the ‘Āmma, and not a result of precise and methodical Ḥadīth analysis and its evidences. Therefore, it is appropriate for researchers, when accepting such attributions, to avoid uninvestigated and unexamined reliance and to analyze the narrations and viewpoints with greater precision and reflection.
- 5) The examination of that single case gave rise to the conjecture that some of the reconciliatory interpretations presented within the framework of Taqīyya are arbitrary reconciliations (unsubstantiated) or lack evidence.
- 6) Finally, the possibility is raised that, considering the introduction of Tahdhīb, it is not unlikely that some of the reconciliatory interpretations presented in this work were mentioned with the aim of teaching and explaining the method of reconciling conflicting narrations, and not for the purpose of inferring a practical ruling (Ṭūsī, 1986 AD/1407 AH (a): 1, 3).
